

Orige

Andrew Leger

You are worth all original thought
You are worth mankind
A strong, ferocious force of Earth
Vibrant patterns, intertwined

You are worth all original thought
The words we don't express
The consonants and syllables
Words that can't be blessed

You are worth all original thought
This I can be sure
You are longing, you are grace
But you are not pure

This is often thought as wretched-
Seen as evil still
Yet you are worth all original thought
And thus you have your fill

Of life's great moments, still unwrit
So I shall write for you
You are worth all original thought
Thought that's been thought through

You are all and you are great
I wish I had a shot
For there is nothing on this Earth
I love more than that original thought.
